

JODY WAGNER

LT. GOVERNOR

For more than 25 years, Jody Wagner has called Virginia home – raising four children, building a small family business, becoming active in her local community, and serving in both the Warner and Kaine Administrations.

Governor Warner's State Treasurer

In 2002, Governor Mark Warner appointed Jody as Treasurer of the Commonwealth of Virginia. When they took office, Virginia was mired in a fiscal crisis and faced record deficits. By making tough choices and working across the aisle, they were able to put Virginia's fiscal house back in order.

Governor Kaine's Secretary of Finance

Governor Tim Kaine named Jody as the Commonwealth's first female Secretary of Finance – the state's Chief Financial Officer. They kept Virginia moving forward by investing in infrastructure while maintaining fiscal discipline.

During Jody's tenure, Virginia was named the best managed state in the nation twice, the best state for business three times, and the best state for raising children.

Successful Small Business Owner

Jody and her husband operate a small family-owned business, Jody's, in Virginia Beach. They partner with several local charitable, religious and educational groups in an example of how local business and community organizations can work together to help their local communities.

Mother, Wife and Community Leader

As the mother of four children, Jody has also been a strong advocate for education as an active member of her children's school community. She and her husband, Dr. Alan Wagner, live in Virginia Beach, where she was a practicing attorney before joining the Warner Administration. She is a former Vice Chair of the Democratic Party of Virginia.
